NYA OFFERS BOYS AND GIRLS FREE TRAINING

Free training in sheet metal work, welding and machine shop, with jobs open to all who satisfactorily complete a few week's course of instruction is open to young men and women between 17 and 25 at the NYA, war production training centers at 151 E. Cass St., Joliet, 8th and Reigle Road, Chicago Heights.

The applicants for training must be unemployed and not in school. The centers operate around the clock, 8 hours a shift with facilities for 60 trainees a shift. It can train 80 youths and girls a day in each of the three courses. Clarence A. Bolton director of the centers, said a flood of requests is being received from manufacturers to replace drafted men with trained workers.

"We could place about 100 girls in skilled jobs if we had the girls," he said, "and local industry is becoming convinced that before Christmas the plants here will be forced to take on double and triple the number of young women they thought possible before the present shortage developed. We still want young men but feel that women will provide the greatest number of trainees."

He said there are not many jobs open here yet for women sheet metal workers but girls trained here can be sent directly to work at the Boeing Aircraft Plant in California. Boeing considers a youth with 200 hours of work in the NYA shops and the foreman's recommendation.

"Peeping Tom" Eludes Capture At Mokena

Mokena had a "Peeping-Tom" case Tuesday night. Shortly after midnight as the Gust Anderson family residing in the Phelps place south of the depot was about to retire, a Peeping Tom looked in at the bottom of the bedroom window. He was unnoticed by the Andersons but Mr. Hamilton residing a few doors down the street, who was walking by the Anderson place with a dog on a leash, noticed a crouching figure at the bedroom window of the Anderson home. At first he thought it was Mr. Anderson fixing a screen window, but when he called to him, the man got up quickly, ran around a tree then headed up the street north to Front Street turned east on this street and disappeared between the postoffice and an adjoining building.

Mr. Hamilton heard the man muttering something about shooting the dog. There is no doubt but the man would have been caught had the dog been turned loose. Later footprints were found in the soft earth around the Anderson place. The foot prints indicated the man was quite heavy. No further trace was found of the "Peeping Tom."

GOV. DWIGHT GREEN TELLS WHY YOU MUST REGISTER

Gov. Dwight H. Green pledges his active support of a statewide campaign to impress upon all citizens of Illinois that it is their civic duty to register by Oct. 6 in order to vote in the November election. The Governor's statement followed a conference with members of his cabinet and civic leaders of the state.

"In November a United States Senator, members of congress, certain state officers, three trustees of the University of Illinois and State senators and representatives will be elected," Gov. Green said.

"We have heard those who advocate political unity as a part of war unity—entrusting to one political party the entire conduct of all our affairs—in fact a political recess which would destroy the two-party system upon which our government is fundamentally based.

"The only balance for administration by any party is the opposition of another able, strong and patriotic party. A single party unchecked by sincere criticism and honest opposition will reach extremes.

"It is only through the two-party system of government that we can preserve the states' place in the national pattern and that we can remain a constitutional republic. The republican form of government assumes that men in general are better able to rule than any particular man. Our republican system is the best political order yet devised for attaining a practical maximum of self determination.

"The only way to preserve the two party system of government, and thus insure the continuation of our constitutional republic, is thru the ballot box. All citizens qualified to vote should do so. Under Illinois' new permanent registration law, every voter must be properly registered.

Residents of the rural districts and of cities and towns which do not have election boards must register with the county clerk. The county clerk in each county in the state will receive registrations any day from now through Oct. 5.

The registration records will be taken to precinct polling places on Sept. 19 and again on Oct. 6 for registration of those who cannot get to the county clerk's office, but it is not advisable to wait for those days because of the rush which can be expected at the precinct polling places. Every citizen should register as early as possible and not wait for the last day.

To further the registration campaign, a slip bearing a message from Gov. Green has been handed to each state employee. This message from the Governor reads:

"The new permanent registration law requires every voter except those residing in cities already having a similar law, to register in person. It is important that as many as possible register with the County Clerk without waiting for the two days set aside for Precinct registration.

"Every State employee should consider it his civic duty to immediately register himself and his family."

MUST FILE CEILING PRICES WITH RATIONING BOARD

Reports have reached the board that persons who have been granted certificates for recapping have continued to run their tires until they cannot be repaired. This definitely is an abuse of tires and those who are guilty will be unable to secure further service.

Apparently these persons have their tires repaired one at a time and before the job is completed some of the tires are gone. It will be better for them to do without the car for a few days than to be compelled to do without it for the duration.

Every person selling service and materials is now required to file ceiling prices with the Local War Price and Rationing Board in the City Hall. These lists are to show the prices charged in March, 1942, and are to be filed by Sept. 15.

The list of those required to file is quite complete and anyone in doubt as to their classification should call the Price Clerk of the Board at Joliet 4286.

Constable Apprehends Three Boys

New Lenox experienced a petty robbery crime wave for three nights beginning with last Friday night when thieves broke in the store of Geo. Marshall in Brookwood. Entrance was gained by removing a window screen. A small amount of change, candy and a few other articles were taken.

Sunday night the Archie Corp store and the Martin Oil Co., office were robbed of small amounts of money and merchandise.

Monday night the New Lenox Food Mart operated by Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Wirth was entered and $150 stolen from the store safe. The garage of Geo. Koeller also was entered. A small amount of change was taken from the cash register and some garage tools which had been taken were later found.

Constable Dewey Moore was making a round of inspection Monday night and as he came near the Geo. Marshall store he saw three boys running from the vicinity of the store. This aroused his suspicions. About 1:30 o'clock Tuesday morning Constable Moore went to the Rock Island depot which is lighted and kept open all night and caught the boys loitering at the station.

They are: Irving VanDyke, 15 years old of 210 South Hebbard St., Joliet, Arthur Vischulis, 14 years old and his brother Edward, 17 years old, both of New Lenox.

Constable Moore placed the youths under arrest and they were taken to the county jail in Joliet where they were questioned by Chief Deputy Sheriff Walter H. McGee who said that the Vischulis brothers admitted they were on probation from a Chicago court for similar offenses and the Van Dyke boy confessed to the burglary of the Corp store.

Tuesday Harvey Frick, Rock Island station agent found a .48 caliber revolver and a flashlight near the depot.

Part of the money stolen was recovered and returned to the owners.

American Housewife's Part in The War Is an Important One

Keeping Her Family Well In Wartime Is Her Special Task.

By JANET CUPLER

Released by Western Newspaper Union.

One of Uncle Sam's best soldiers is the American housewife. Her uniform is a kitchen apron, her ammunition a bright smile and the capable hands with which she does the proverbial million and one things that make hers a 64-hour, seven-day week.

She is usually content with the only reward she really wants—the love and gratitude of a happy, healthy family. But once in a while you hear her say, "I feel so guilty. I'm not doing anything to help win the war. Of course I keep house and save scrap and buy war bonds, but I'd like to feel that I'm doing something definite, like joining the WAACs or working in a defense factory."

We can't all join the WAACs. And we can't all work in defense factories. But we can do an important job right in our own homes. The war will finally be won only with the help of the American housewife, and the better job she does, the sooner she will be able to rejoice in the victory she helped to win.

When government reports recently showed that only about one-third of the families in the United States have diets that are adequate to maintain health, it became apparent that one of the important factors in winning the war would be proper nutrition (the right food as well as the right amount of it), for, although Women in rural communities, faced with a shortage of farm labor, are learning to care for poultry and livestock. Rural health programs include the study of nutrition.

our soldiers are the best fed in the world, the men and women who keep them equipped, those employed in our war industries, are sometimes very badly fed indeed. A survey conducted among employees of one large aircraft company revealed that about half showed definite signs of vitamin deficiency. Healthy workers are good workers, and it is up to the American housewife to see that the members of her family are properly fed.

WHAT TO BUY

Proper nutrition begins with the food you buy. Although there is much to be learned about those mysterious substances called vitamins, the fact is that we need them, as well as minerals, fats, proteins and carbohydrates. A balanced diet must include them all. The amount of food each person requires depends largely upon how active he is. One who sits all day will, of course, require proportionately less food, particularly of the muscle and tissue building and energy producing types, than one who is doing hard physical labor.

Each normal person, however, needs—every day—some milk; whole grain or "enriched" bread or cereal; green or yellow vegetables; oranges, or other citrus fruit, or tomatoes; meat, fish, or poultry; eggs (at least three or four a week); butter or other fats rich in vitamins; and a limited amount of sweets. These foods can always be supplemented with additional vegetables and fruits. Experts also recommend that peas, dried beans, nuts and peanut butter be included from time to time.

Under normal circumstances it is best to use all fresh foods, especially vegetables, as soon as possible. Long exposure to the air deprives them of some of their value. But Don't spurn the lowly peanut! On the way to your table by way of the peanut butter jar, these peanuts are rich in food value. Experts recommend that peanut butter be included regularly in your diet.

today, with gas rationed in many parts of the country and with the housewife eager to do her part by saving her tires, she may find it necessary to do her marketing only once or twice a week.

HOW TO KEEP IT

Then proper refrigeration becomes more important than ever. But putting foods in the right place in the refrigerator is just as important as keeping them there at all. They must be kept cold, but not too cold. And they must have the proper amount of humidity, neither too much nor too little.

Frozen foods need extreme cold with no humidity. Vegetables and greens need mild cold with lots of humidity. Milk, butter, staples and prepared dishes other than frozen ones need only mild cold. Meat requires a slightly lower temperature than vegetables, and more humidity.

In general, 40 degrees is considered a safe temperature for most foods. At that temperature the growth of bacteria is usually retarded. Cold air travels downward, so the coldest places in your refrigerator will be the freezing chamber and the spot directly under it. Put frozen foods in the freezing chamber, meat and fish directly under it. Milk and cream and other beverages to be chilled should be placed on the shelf next to the freezing chamber.

Staples, butter and left-overs will keep satisfactorily in the middle section, as they require moderate cold but no special care. Vegetables, too, and most fruits can be kept there, but they require more humidity. Some refrigerators have special compartments for them, but if yours does not, one of the vegetable bags or a covered dish will do.

Canned foods that will not be used right away, salad dressing and pickles need not, and bananas must not, be put in the refrigerator. On the other hand, bread, coffee, shelled nuts and chocolate keep better there.

SPARE THAT VITAMIN

Even when she buys the proper foods and plans her meals to include them, the housewife's job has only begun. Vitamins are perishable. Minerals can be washed away. By improper preparation and cooking she can lose much of the value for which she so carefully paid at the market.

Here are some suggestions that Women all over the country are taking courses in nutrition, first aid and home nursing to fit them for the important task of keeping their families healthy. These women, part of a class of 20, are taking an examination in nutrition.

SAVE SCRAP

When you save scrap, kitchen grease, tin cans or paper, you are really helping to clothe our soldiers and send fighter planes to bomb the enemy. The grease you save is processed to secure glycerine, which is then used in the manufacture of TNT for shells. Waste paper can be used for shell containers; 25 pounds makes eight shell containers. One hand iron contains enough metal for two helmets. Fifty feet of garden hose will make four raincoats. Thirty-two toothpaste tubes contain the tin needed for a fighter plane.

will help you get the most from the food you buy:

Don't keep vegetables long at room temperature. Wash them and put them in the refrigerator.

Pare potatoes as thinly as possible. Scrub carrots with a brush instead of scraping them.

Don't shell peas until you are ready to cook them.

Don't soak vegetables in water for any length of time.

Cut carrots and other long vegetables lengthwise.

Cook frozen vegetables without thawing first. Some vitamin content is lost in thawing.

Don't handle vegetables any more than necessary.

Don't squeeze oranges until you are ready to use the juice.

Don't chop salad vegetables and greens until you are ready to use them.

Then add the dressing immediately after chopping them. The dressing acts as a protective covering and helps to prevent the destruction of valuable vitamins by exposure to the air.

Don't handle vegetables any more than necessary.

Don't use soda in cooking green vegetables. That lovely, vivid green color it gives them is a danger signal.

HOW TO COOK IT

Last year, impressed with the importance of proper cooking, Home Economics Institute of Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing company sponsored a program of research conducted by scientists to determine the exact amount of vitamins lost in improper cooking. Four typical vegetables were chosen—potatoes, carrots, fresh peas and broccoli—and the results of the tests demonstrated conclusively that water, heat and air, used improperly, can destroy as much as 33.7 per cent of the precious vitamins.

Water, heat and air are essential to cooking, and some vitamin content will be lost in all cooking, but the following procedure helps to reduce this loss to a minimum:

USE LITTLE OR NO WATER. Steaming is preferable to boiling, so use just enough water to produce steam. Wash leafy vegetables thoroughly just before cooking. The amount of moisture that clings to the leaves will be sufficient to produce steam.

START FAST, COOK QUICKLY. When the boiling point is reached, turn your fire down and let the vegetables simmer. Continuous boiling is destructive. Be sure the heat is evenly distributed. For this purpose a flat bottomed pan with straight sides is best.

COOK IN COVERED UTENSILS. The cover keeps the steam in, the air out. Be sure the cover fits tightly.

DON'T STIR. Again, this lets in additional air. If the heat is evenly distributed, stirring is unnecessary.

WASHINGTON. — Americans are talking a lot about the privations they will have to endure if the war continues for years, as seems most likely. "Privation" is too strong a word, yet an accurate one, for it means to be deprived of things, and we are certainly going to be deprived of many things, the liberal use of automobiles being the most glaring at the moment.

Not only that, the style of living of most of the middle and upper middle classes is going to take a tumble, due to taxation.

But consider what the average German or Japanese thinks about as he or she faces the next few years of war, especially the Germans, for many of them have enjoyed and all of them have heard about a very full life indeed, so far as food, drink and comforts are concerned.

Thinking About What??

What do those normally heavy-eating and warmth-loving Germans think about? We know that in no winter of the war so far has there been sufficient heat to make the civilians of Germany really comfortable. Austria and the other conquered territories have suffered more, but the Germans have been plenty cold.

To the extent they have sacrificed warm clothing and blankets on the pleas of their leaders they will be colder this coming winter. And, being cold themselves, they will be more concerned about what the bitter Russian cold is doing to their boys in the army. (This on the assumption that Russia continues to fight.)

Entering the realm of wishful thinking, let us assume that the Russians are able to prevent the Germans from winning any spectacular victories.

This seems possible, if not probable, as we study the reports of American airplanes grounded in Turkey. Incidentally a lot of U. S. planes and skillful crews interned in Turkey might prove quite discouraging to any Nazi plan for shortcutting to the Caucasus through that country.

With American air power important over the Black sea area it seems likely that even the capture of Sevastopol may not prove the open door to the oil fields that it once seemed to the German high command. The prospect is not apt to make the average life-loving German, with his belt tightened and his body cold next winter, too enthusiastic about the success of Der Fuehrer.

Difficulties Removed

From Dewey's Path

The decision of Thomas E. Dewey to serve out his four years as governor of New York, if elected, carries more significance than most observers have read into it. As a simple promise to the voters of New York that, if he should be elected, he will not be a candidate for the Republican nomination for President in 1944 is of course the most obvious one.

Such a promise removes considerable difficulty from Dewey's path to success at the polls this November. Incidentally it takes quite a load off the rest of the Republican ticket, for it is one thing to run behind and with a popular figure of demonstrated political appeal, and another thing when one's opponents accuse the head of the ticket of not being really interested in the job he is presently seeking, but is planning to use it merely as a stepping stone.

Thus the Dewey announcement might easily mean the difference between Dewey winning the governorship and losing it. It might also just as easily mean the success or defeat of one or more of his running mates.

Shrewd old political observers read a deeper meaning into the announcement. Obviously, they point out, the promise of Dewey means that he will not be an important figure among the 1944 GOP presidential aspirants, win or lose.

If he wins, there is his promise. If he loses, he will come pretty close to being a dead cock in the political pit in 1944 anyway.

But they figure that if Dewey is half as smart as they think he is, he actually is sacrificing nothing by making this promise. Their theory is that no matter how strong Dewey might be by 1944, it would be almost unthinkable that he should have a real chance at the presidency.

In 1944, they reason, the war will either still be going on or it will be just over. It cannot, by any stretch of the imagination, be as far in the past when that election comes as was the First World War when Warren G. Harding crushed James M. Cox, who was burdened with all the feeling against Woodrow Wilson and a stiff isolationist sentiment.

JUDAH: AN EXAMPLE OF SELF-SACRIFICE

LESSON TEXT—Genesis 44:18-34. GOLDEN TEXT—Hereby perceive we the love of God, because he laid down his life for us: and we ought to lay down our lives for the brethren.—1 John 3:16.

The family is still the fundamental unit of society, and is therefore of more importance than the church, the state, or the social order of which it is a vital part. Every force which encourages the breakdown of the sacred relationships of the home and family is set for the destruction of society itself.

Men have too often chosen to go the way of the flesh, and therefore they have disregarded God's plan and purpose. But marriage is just as sacred as ever in His sight; the home is to be kept for Him; and brotherly love still finds a high place among the virtues of a man.

Today's lesson is a continuation of the story of Joseph's life. As we study it we must bear in mind Joseph's dealings with his brethren, who as yet did not recognize him as the one they had sold into captivity. He was bringing them kindly but definitely to the point of real repentance, so that he could show himself gracious to them.

To do so he had brought disaster upon them. Being happily on their way homeward with a new supply of food, they were overtaken and proved to be thieves, and Benjamin, the beloved of their father Jacob, stood condemned by their own words, to death.

In that crisis the mouths of the others seemed closed, but Judah, who had really saved Joseph's life (Gen. 37:26, 27) and who had apparently come to himself as a man of essential goodness, pleaded for Benjamin's life. That plea presented a truly sacrificial brotherly love, as he manifested

I. Courage (v. 18).

Easy rests the yoke of family life as long as all is joyful and prosperous. But when adversity strikes, when sorrow comes, or sickness, or sin, then the true test of devotion is at hand.

It was a brave and manly thing for Judah to stand before the one whom he knew only as the man who was "even as Pharaoh." The circumstances were all against him. He expected the flaming anger of the offended ruler. His brethren had collapsed in despair. It was one of those dark hours which come to every family when someone must demonstrate true love by being strong-hearted and steady.

II. Intelligence (vv. 19-29).

Crises call for more than a cheerful smile or an encouraging word, much as they may mean in such an hour. We must be prepared by our close contact with our loved ones to speak and act with vigor and assurance.

Judah's plea is a masterpiece of argumentation and appeal, demonstrating that he was not only well-informed about his family and its problems, but ready to use his knowledge skillfully and effectively.

III. Self-Denial (vv. 30-33).

One step deeper goes the devotion of this man to his father and his brother. He had done no wrong that merited punishment, but evidently his brother Benjamin had been guilty. Had he been of the spirit of Cain he would have said, "Am I my brother's keeper?" and let him answer for himself. Why should Judah suffer for another? Why should he allow himself to be imprisoned in a strange land to save his father from sorrow and his brother from what seemed to be the just reward for his deeds?

Thus reasons the man of the world, but such is not the language of the true brother, who says, "Let thy servant abide instead of the lad as a bondman."

IV. Love (v. 34).

Love for father and brother underlies all of the courage, conviction and self-sacrifice of a man like Judah. In his younger years, and possibly under the influence of his brothers, he had failed in that respect, but now his real devotion to his brother was evident.

That affection was a real, powerful, and beautiful thing, and yet it is but a faint prefiguring of the affection of the One who "sticketh closer than a brother," who "though he was rich, yet for your sakes he became poor, that ye through his poverty might be rich" (Prov. 18:24; II Cor. 8:9).

Let us improve the opportunity to review our relations with our own family, to determine whether there is aught that we an intelligent and courageous self-sacrifice should do for our own.

THESE curtains were made of the long pieces of good material from each side of a pair of sheets that were worn in the center. They were dyed a soft cream; then wide strips of gingham and narrow ones of prepared bias trimming were stitched in place to make stripes. The chart shows the colors used and also gives the widths and spacing of stripes. In case you should want to use short lengths of goods for the foundation part, stitch these together with seams on the right side; then place contrasting strips over joinings. Colors used should repeat the colors in rugs, pictures, books or bric-a-brac.

Famous Signs

A few years ago on Broadway, New York, several large electric signs won distinction in unusual ways. One became famous because a king purchased a replica for his palace in the Orient, another because it regularly received fan mail from its countless admirers and another because it virtually stopped traffic each night at a certain hour while a number of living chorus girls "danced" up and down on its face to the music of their orchestra.—Collier's.

THE Secret OF THE MARSHBANKS

W.N.U. RELEASE

THE STORY SO FAR: An orphan since the age of seven, Charlotte (Cherry) Rawlings knows almost nothing about her early history. Judge Judson Marshbanks, her co-guardian with Emma Haskell, arranges for her to leave Saint Dorothea's, and tells her that Emma has obtained for her a secretarial position with the wealthy Mrs. Porteous Porter, of San Francisco, where Emma is housekeeper. She is first to go to the Marshbanks mansion. When she arrives she dines alone with the Judge as Fran, his young wife, and his niece, Amy, are dining out. Kelly Coates, an artist, drops in and Cherry feels very ill at ease in her convent clothes. On their way out, Fran and Amy stop and casually nod when Cherry is introduced. It is evident to Cherry that Kelly and Fran are interested in each other. As Fran and Amy leave, she stands on the stairway, concealed by palms, and hears laughing reference to her and her clothes.

Now continue with the story.

CHAPTER IV

Mrs. Porter was a stout, soft, pretty woman of seventy-four. Some physical difficulty, perhaps not more serious than her weight itself, made it inconvenient for her to ever walk more than a few steps at a time. She took a drive every day, she could get to the bathroom for the comfort of a long, leisurely bath, and every morning she moved to her favorite chair in a sunny bay window or beside an old-fashioned fire.

As Dovey Glashell, Mrs. Porter had had an adored, flirtatious, giddy girlhood. Hers had been the generation that twined flowers in hair and danced kid slippers to pulp at formal balls. Upon marrying the richest and most eligible young man in a city full of mining and railway, banking and land barons' sons, she had flashed upon a stunned group of friends the news of a prospective European honeymoon trip with her bridegroom.

Emma was indispensable; she kept the whole enormous machine running; she knew where business papers were, and what the lawyer came about, and when to call the doctor. But there was nothing soft, friendly, companionable about Emma, and at the telephone or when it came to special shopping she was grimly inadequate. Also, she was a monotonous and disinterested reader. Mrs. Porter had a large mail; she had long been unequal to it, and had employed unsatisfactory girls to act as secretary from time to time with wearying results.

Cherry began her duties with the trembling feeling that by no chance could her lines have fallen permanently in such pleasant places. To be able to creep away from the world that in one brief encounter had hurt her so terribly and to hide herself here, with a lovely room for her own, a houseful of books for company, amazing meals served at regular — or indeed, irregular — hours, and only a gentle, sweet, helpless old lady to amuse seemed too good a fortune to be true.

From this she passed to a sort of exultation that she had succeeded. She answered the telephone and wrote letters and drove out in the park in her new brown coat and becoming brown hat, in a pleasant quiver of feeling herself liked and needed and approved.

The third phase came only after several weeks, and was one of doubt, boredom and weariness. She wanted exercise and interest and companionship; she wanted a sense of living; instead she was like a girl caught in a dream.

Outwardly, it was all easy and delightful. Cherry came into her employer's room not earlier than half past ten o'clock every morning, not later than eleven. Mrs. Porter only lost sight of the girl for brief intervals thereafter until ten o'clock at night. Cherry had immediately discovered her appetite for flattery and had innocently gratified it in their first days together. Now she had to pay the price for this concession with constant pleasantries.

"I like you because you're so frank with me, Cherry," Mrs. Porter said to her once. "I told Emma that you were a blunt little thing and she was afraid I didn't like it. But I do! I love people to be absolutely frank with me."

With her first sight of Emma, Cherry had had the feeling that the long years since last they had met were as nothing and that she was a little girl of seven again, living in a small tiled house with a patio and a fountain, and running in and out of the bedroom where her mother lay always in bed. A thousand details, half forgotten until now, had rushed back to her, and she had longed for the moment when she might talk freely to Emma of the past.

To include any exercise at all in the twenty-four hours she formed the habit of rising early and taking a long walk about the streets or into the eucalyptus-shaded roads of the Presidio before breakfast.

In the freshness and sparkle of these winter mornings life seemed exhilarating enough. But after her breakfast the warmth and torpidity of the Porter mansion enveloped her again like a stupefying drug.

"I wonder," she wrote Anita, "how long this would go on? Emma—that's my old nurse, you know—has been in one job or another like this for years and years. Well, anyway, I got my first pay yesterday and I'm going to buy myself a hat I saw on Polk street. My love to everyone, Madeleine especially, and Elizabeth and all the Sisters and girls."

One day Cherry had an adventure. It came on a quiet, foggy afternoon when all the world seemed dull and quiet. Cherry was driving with Mrs. Porter when her old companion said suddenly, "Look there—wait a minute—stop him!"

Automatically obeying these instructions Cherry seized the speaking tube and Merryweather drew up at the right-hand side of the road.

Then the girl saw that two bay horses carrying a man and a woman were pacing along one of the bridge paths.

—and that the woman was Fran Marshbanks and the man Kelly Coates.

In response to old Mrs. Porter's gesticulations, and her voice at the window she was energetically lowering, the riders came close to the car and Fran gave Cherry her second careless smile and nod, and Kelly saluted her by touching his cap with his whip. He was presented to Mrs. Porter, and as the two women fell into a discussion of the list of patronesses for a series of concerts, he rode around the back of the car and chatted with Cherry at her own opened window.

"Well, Miss—I have to call you Cherry, I've forgotten the other name," he began.

"Oh, do!" said Cherry, the dull park breaking into sparkles, the white winter sky turned June.

"Cherry then. What have you done to yourself? You look like another woman!"

"It's my hat," said Cherry. The Polk street creation was on her head, a picturesque hat that came far down over the streaked gold and brown of her hair.

"It's more than your hat," Kelly assured her. "You've washed your face, too."

Her laugh rang out; he had not heard her laugh before, and as it had impressed Judson Marshbanks at the convent a month or so earlier, it impressed the younger man now as being extraordinarily fresh and pleasant.

He looked at her a long time, thoughtfully. Or at least, if only for a few seconds, it seemed a long time to Cherry. She felt the warm color in her cheeks and the slow beat of her heart.

"I suppose that's true," Kelly said at last in a surprised tone.

"I'd read about girls making their debuts," Cherry pursued, warmed to the very soul by his attentive, half-sympathetic and half-amused look, "and orchids and all that. But somehow, just that night, to see her so safe and so happy and having such a wonderful time when I was homesick and tired and I knew I looked so awful..."

"Well, of course," he agreed quickly, as she paused in a sort of shame and embarrassment. "Amy, you mean?"

"Amy."

"She's not having such a wonderful time," he said. "It's all comparative. She thinks other girls are having a slightly better time, and that drives her wild. Mrs. Marshbanks, Fran, was speaking of it just a few minutes ago, and saying what fools girls are!"

"Oh, girls are fools all right," Cherry agreed meekly, and as the man laughed she laughed too.

"Mr. Coates," old Mrs. Porter said, breaking into the conversation and leaning across Cherry to catch his attention.

"Frances has promised to bring Amy to dine with me two weeks from Thursday, and I want you to come too."

"I'm a dead loss at dinners," Kelly said, laughing. "You'll never ask me again."

"Well, we'll see about that," said the old lady, in high feather. "But you come, now! My nephew George's daughter, Dorothy Page-Smith, is going to be here—coming up with her mother from Santa Barbara, where they tell me she's been breakin' all hearts, and I want her to meet Amy and some of the other youngsters."

"Jud may not be here; he gets back from Portland tonight," Fran said, "but he may have to go right back again. So Mr. Coates will squire me. I'll guarantee him."

"And you tell Mrs. Dickson to get Mary Trainor and Lizzie Block on that committee!" Mrs. Porter adjured her vigorously.

"I will. I've not been going to the meetings, more shame to me," said Fran, "but I'm going tomorrow and I'll do what I can."

"And you tell 'em Cherry'll send them my check for two hundred."

"I'll tell them," Fran did not say anything about the generous size of the donation. And Cherry fancied that her employer looked just a little dashed and disappointed as the riders cantered away on the bridge path again.

"We none of us understood," Mrs. Porter said then, in her sweet, wistful voice, "why Judson Marshbanks married Frances Unger—she's a very brilliant girl, but I don't think she's pretty, and she's twenty-two years younger than he is. Seems so strange!"

This was as near as Cherry ever had heard her come to criticism or unkindness, and she smiled at her interrogatively.

"That doesn't sound like you, Mrs. Porter," she said, with the simple daring that she knew well the old woman liked. "You always say such nice things about everyone."

"Well, I hope I always do, my dear, but somehow that girl always does seem to me outlandish. And I loved her first wife, Mary Lee Carey. She died—oh, ten years ago. Her mother was Sophy Laquelle, French family here—lovely people."

Mrs. Porter's proposed dinner party for a chosen dozen of the debutantes took on an increasing importance as the days went by, and, by the debutantes' mothers and families, was by degrees developed into a much larger affair. It was a long time—perhaps twenty or twenty-five years—since entertaining on a large scale had taken place in the old Glashell mansion, and the newspapers made much of it, and many were the friendly offers of assistance to Cherry's employer as the plan got daily under way.

The original twelve girls swelled to a score, to thirty, for there were many who must not be forgotten, and at least forty eligible young men were asked to join them. Then certain favored and intimate elders were included to save the hostess the least effort, and in no time at all caterers had come in to set tables and decorate them and prepare a sumptuous meal for one hundred guests; florists arrived with palms and ropes of chrysanthemums; newspaper men and photographers gave the house no rest; a five piece orchestra was engaged, and Mrs. Porter remained in bed all day, getting herself completely rested and ready.

To Cherry's eagerness and inexperience and hunger for excitement all this was satisfying beyond words. She was everywhere; she helped with everything.

In the midst of the flurry the guest of honor, Dorothy Page-Smith, arrived with a formidable mother as escort, and took possession of one of the big rooms on the second floor. This alone would have supplied Cherry with pleasurable interest, for Dorothy was a harmless, indeed a seemingly half-witted little creature who turned to Cherry at once as being the only other person of anything like her age in the house, and in a babyish lisp consulted her about her gowns, her hair arrangement, her beaux and the possibility of her having anything but a "wotten" time in a place where she just didn't know one "thingle thole."

The day of the party was overcast with a cold rain spattering down.

At seven o'clock, trim and demure in her blue dress with the silver buttons, Cherry went into Mrs. Porter's bedroom to find Emma and Ferny busily getting the old lady into a magnificent robe of silver- and -blue brocade, decorating the beautiful curls of her rich white hair with diamond butterflies and preparing her with a preliminary cup of tea and chicken sandwich for the evening's frivolities.

She had at first planned to go downstairs tonight, to be installed majestically in some great chair, to welcome her guests herself. But this seemed at the last moment too great an effort.

Dripping Audiences

Much water must be removed from the atmosphere by air-conditioning equipment to keep the humidity at a comfortable level in places where large numbers congregate in summer, according to Collier's. For instance, an audience of 2,000 in a movie theater on a hot night gives off from 24 to 36 gallons of moisture an hour, depending on the nature of the picture.

IT IS a simple design which always looks best. That's why you'll admire and approve this cunning frock every time you see your little girl wearing it. The

In choosing an innerspring mattress, look for these: well-tempered steel wire coils, long-fibered cotton or curled hair padding top and bottom, sturdy borders, strong ticking that won't stretch and some provision for ventilation.

Do not cut the skins from apples when making applesauce. Remove blossom end, stem and parts that are not good. When thoroughly cooked, put through a coarse sieve. Made in this way the skins give the sauce a pink coloring.

To help prevent peeled pears, apples and bananas from darkening when they're to be used in a fruit cup, cover them with grapefruit juice and chill.

When making raisin breads, cookies, etc., cover the raisins with hot water and simmer them for about five minutes before using. They will be larger and softer.

You will find it a safe rule to take a thing just as quick as it is offered—especially a job. Service Men's News

Citizens Service Committee
Tinley Park, Ill.

I thank the service committee for the cigarettes which I received this week. I received a mark of 80 for my first course here at the Signal Corps Technical School. The final test consisted of one hundred and fifteen questions.

We had to know all the things we learned in detail. This of course required quite a bit of hard studying during class as well as after class. Here, at the nation's largest Signal Corps school we learn the most difficult complications of Signal Corps devices and marching.

Some of the finest college students are often times stumped as to the technical ways of signal Corps work. Some of the fellows say if they can learn the work here they can learn almost anything.

Many people have the wrong impression of the signal corps. I know I had before I was sent here to Camp Crowder. I was under the impression at the time that all the Signal Corps men did was talk over a telephone or send messages and that was that.

The principle of the signal corps is to send messages thru in time of war however; but there is a lot more involved than just getting the messages thru. We must learn almost every signal corps implement from top to bottom, this takes in all the Technical things one ever dreamed of could be fitted into one small unit.

We spend seven hours in school each day, including Saturday. Signal corps soldiers are furnished with rifles when ready for combat duty. In the past such soldiers used the pistol as their only weapon. In this war where Parachutists land behind the front, signal corps soldiers must have the use of the latest in fire arms to meet any eventuality.

That's about all for the present time.

Yours truly,
Eddie Nugent

Hello Everybody:

I'm finally getting around to writing again; it seems like all I do is get farther and farther behind and then I take a day off and catch up. I want to thank everybody for the package and also for paper that I get. It's pretty good to read all about the town especially since you can't get back there that is the best way to find out all the news.

We're leaving this camp Tuesday and that is my new address at the top of this letter. Our new camp is about 50 miles north of here and is really in the mountains. Kind of rugged country and is far away from everything. It's at least 10 miles from a main highway

REPUBLICANS INDEPENDENT VOTERS DISILLUSIONED DEMOCRATS

The Chicago Kelly-Nash machine bosses are hoping that you will not register and therefore not be able to vote for Senator C. WAYLAND BROOKS and his colleagues on the Republican Congressional, Legislative, State and County tickets.

Your electric cords are precious —

MAKE THEM LAST!

Electric cords are made mostly of rubber and copper—two materials that are much in demand these days! Check the electric cords in your home, using this guide. Make them last just as long as they were designed to last!

HOW TO MAKE CORDS LAST LONGER

There are three things that commonly cause your cords to wear out:

1. FRICTION. When disconnecting, don't yank on the cord—take hold of the plug. Never let a cord become twisted or knotted. When not in use, hang it over two widely separated hooks, so there will be no sharp bend. Never run cords under carpets, or nail them to the wall or floor. Be sure they are away from moving parts of appliances.

2. HEAT. Keep cords away from radiators or steam pipes. Even direct sunlight will shorten the life of the rubber in a cord.

3. MOISTURE. Don't let electric cords get wet. Even rubber-covered extensions will in time absorb water.

WHERE TO LOOK FOR DAMAGED CORDS

Appliance cords wear most quickly at the points where the cord enters the appliance and the plug. Check the cords on your lamp bases, electric fans, irons and other frequently moved appliances.

WHAT TO DO ABOUT DAMAGED CORDS

Never try to push worn cords out of sight—they should be fixed immediately. Unless you are sure of your repairing skill, call an electrician. He can often re-use most of the old cord, and you know the job is done right!

THE ILLINOIS HOME FRONT

This is the people's war. It is not a war fought only by the soldiers on the battlefields.

The soldiers of this war are also the many hands of children that comb the homes, backyards and farm yards for scrap—the Junior Salvage Army. They are the valiant homemakers who pour the smallest meat drippings into the Waste Fats Salvage can. They are the industry officials, the hotel managers, the scrap dealers who scrape the bottom of their scrap barrels to increase the flow of iron and steel scrap to hungry steel furnaces.

To keep steel mills going and to prevent production of war materials from bogging down, Illinois must supply 1,500,000 tons of scrap before December 31 next, War Production Board officials announced as the salvage drive became more intense. Two-thirds of the scrap must be supplied by industrial plants and one third must come from homes and farms, cities and rural communities.

Special merit awards will be given by the War Production Board to hotels and scrap dealers who show outstanding results in the nation's big drive for iron and steel scrap. The merit emblem for scrap dealers who increase their monthly scrap shipments by 33 1-3 per cent over the monthly average during the first six months bears the legend, "Cooperating With War Production Board, Scrap Producer." Cooperating hotels throughout Illinois will receive certificates of merit signed by Gov. Dwight H. Green.

A harvest of trouble for the Axis will be reaped this fall in more than 100 Scrap Harvests and rallies planned for Illinois during these next three weeks. Many counties have set quotas of 1,000 pounds of scrap from every farm to be brought in before snow flies and ice freezes metals and old machinery in the fields.

GAS RATIONING—Illinois can meet the challenge of control over civilian automobile travel by "eliminating needless driving," John C. Weigel, regional OPA administrator, advised in the wake of the decision of the President's rubber committee. Administrative structure for gasoline rationing or any other method of allocating mileage is already set up pending instructions on procedure.

TRANSPORTATION—Nine regional offices in the nation were created by the Office of Defense Transportation recently in assuming control of virtually all commercial motor vehicles and requiring them to carry certificates of war necessity to govern maximum OMT and minimum loads permitted. OMT had previously announced that it would take sweeping controls over millions of these vehicles by November 15, including rationing of gasoline, tires, tubes and accessories. New ODT offices will be set up in Rockford, Danville, Quincy, Peoria, Springfield and Cario.

FATS AND GREASES—There's no call for any housewife to feel unpatriotic if she pours the bacon fat into the cooking jar instead of into the grease salvage can, as Uncle Sam is asking only for those fats which are usually wasted. The half billion pounds asked of America is calculated on the average amount wasted last year. Of course if any one wants to be extra patriotic she can always give up a little—a tea spoonful or a tablespoonful—of what she ordinarily uses.

BUS SERVICE—Gulf Transport Co. and Belleville-St. Louis Coach Co. were ordered to coordinate inter-city bus service between St. Louis, Sparta, Percy and Chester in southern Illinois by October 1. Elimination of duplicate routes will save 6,120 miles monthly in vital rubber and equipment prices.

FARM PRICES—OPA warns farmers that inflated war prices not only handicap the whole war program, but endanger post-war security. Farmers, on the whole, haven't found the going tough so far according to recent surveys, except for the shortage of labor. They're buying more goods and making more property improvements than at any time since the unlucky boom days of the last war. With tobacco, wool, and all meats bringing prices far above parity, producers might well recall the tragic slump which followed the last war-created prosperity.

YANKEE INVENTIVENESS—The handicaps caused by shortages are being overcome by American ingenuity. New types of containers have been developed to meet metal restrictions. Heavy paper cartons are taking the place of wooden containers and wire-bound boxes for overseas shipments. Many kinds of canned goods now come in jars and bottles. Paper containers are substituted for scarce burlap bags, and paper "cans" with metal ends are used for packaging baking powder and dried fruits.

DAME FASHION—WPB restrictions on wearing apparel are being tightened. Styles and colors of shoes are curtailed for next year, ordnance factory uniforms must comply with measurements allowed in Order L-85. Investigations are being made of manufacturers of "zoot suits," yard consuming apparel worn by jitterbug dancers.

SCRAPS OF INFORMATION—Last year's production of all-wire coat hangers if made into military barbed wire, would girdle the earth six and one-half times. Caffeine, which goes into the "cola" drinks has been taken out of general circulation. Building lumber is so scarce that we will be using bricks and tile for even temporary structures. Sixteen men and one woman received first awards of certificates of individual production for ideas. NOTE to smokers—cigarettes will be dryer as their moistening agent, glycol, is going to cool military engines.

OFFICIAL U. S. TREASURY
WAR BOND QUOTAS FOR SEPTEMBER

Washington, D. C., Sept. 8.—September War Bond Quotas for the 3,070 counties in the nation were announced today by Henry Morgenthau, Jr., Secretary of the Treasury, to make up the national September total of $775,000,000.

The September quota for the State of Illinois is $57,500,000.

In fixing the county quotas, the Treasury has continued its announced policy of setting the monthly quotas in line with the seasonal distribution of income with the billion-dollar monthly national average as the annual goal.

The national quota for May, when the nation went on the billion-a-month annual basis, was $600,000,000. For June the quota was $800,000,000 and for July it jumped to $1,000,000,000. The August quota was $815,000,000, so to maintain the billion-dollar annual monthly average, the quotas for the Fall and Winter months must necessarily be stepped up considerably to reach the objective set.

PSYCHIATRY AND WAR

(Suggested by the proposal that, before being inducted, all men in the armed forces should undergo tests by psychiatrists.)

CASE 3462: Subject's name is Paul Revere. Very impulsive type. Admits he likes to ride horseback at night. Prefers to do so alone. As a child played with lanterns, rejecting toys. First words as an infant according to parents was "Gid-dap!" Admits he liked to go around at night waking up neighbors.

Conclusion: Erratic, stubborn type with little emotional stability. We think he should be carefully watched, kept away from horses and not trusted with any mission of importance.

CASE 7629: Subject's name is Israel Putnam. Admits he can't stand being left out of a fight. Will drop everything to get into one. Highly impulsive and quarrelsome. As a child he was left in his baby carriage a few minutes by a nurse. He promptly took hold of the wheels and rode it down a steep flight of steps. Seems proud of the incident when reminded of it now and says he would do it again. Likes to argue. Very difficult to stop. Impatient of those who differ with him. Has sharp temper and is given to violent actions on occasion.

Conclusion: Clearly a mental case. Keep in a cool dry place and permit no initiative.

CASE 9726: Subject's name is George Washington. Exhibits many unusual traits and tendencies. As a young man he cut down a fine cherry tree without being asked to do so. When father asked him if he did it he promptly told the truth, in fact it was difficult to tell whether he was confessing or boasting. Liked to fight Indians although he could make good living as a surveyor. Openly says kings are over-rated. Says he wouldn't be one if he could.

Conclusion: Schizophrenia or something. Plainly not type suited to position of leadership.

CASE 9277: Name, U. S. Grant. Very unstable. Case history shows him indolent and disposed to let things slide. Careless about personal appearance. Difficult to draw into a discussion but very vehement when once aroused. Smoked cigars in grammar school. Drinks. When asked if he drank anything, he replied: "Anything!"

Conclusion: Unreliable, intemperate and a little touched in the head. Suited only to indoor work under careful watch.

CASE 6223: Benedict Arnold. Subjected this man to exhaustive tests. He met them all with pose and patience. Very intelligent. Has remarkable self-confidence. Expresses self lucidly and seems well informed on everything. Is somewhat vain, a bit impetuous and rather fond of money and position, but on the whole a charming, highly intelligent person.

Conclusion: This man is clearly of exceptional character. We would not hesitate to trust him anywhere.

Do You Remember—

Away back when if the railroads were doing capacity business both in passengers and freight they could make money?

Impending Battle: When the WAAC who never forgets finds she has to salute the captain who once said she had no style sense.

We hear that every time our fleet commanders hear Alex Seversky on the air they check up to see if they still have any vessels left.

500,000 typewriters are wanted for the army and navy. We deplore this. The army and navy have enough troubles without having to master the job of changing a typewriter ribbon.

Add similes: As funny as a politician urging that politics be dropped for the duration.

Ima Dodo watched the recent total eclipse of the moon. It lasted an hour and a half. "Gosh!" she exclaimed. "For a time I was afraid it wouldn't get out of it."

Secretary Stimson announces that the army will now take men 50 years of age. Bring your pills, liniments, arch supporters, brace and truss!

Can You Remember—

Away back when woman's place was said to be in the home?

The question every girl with a sweetheart in the service asks whenever any other male of the same age is observed in civvies, "Why isn't he in uniform?"

On Second Thought—What Does It Matter?

"Darling," he asked, as he drew his fiancée closer to him, "am I the first man you have ever kissed?"

"William," replied the girl, somewhat testily, "before we go any farther I would like to ask you a few questions. You are aware that my father is a millionaire something like ten times over, aren't you?"

"Y-yes."

"You understand that when he dies his fortune will be left to me?"

"Y-yes."

"You know that I have a quarter of a million in my name at the bank?"

"Y-yes."

"And own two and a half millions' worth of property?"

"Y-yes."

"That my diamonds are insured for a quarter of a million?"

"Y-yes."

"Then, for goodness' sake, talk sense! What difference would it make to you if I had been kissed by a thousand men before I met you?"

Hope or Regret

Do not anxiously hope for what is not yet come; do not vainly regret what is already past.—Chinese Proverb.

The Touch of a Friendly Hand

A gentleman went into a jeweler's shop and asked to be shown some precious stones. The shopkeeper brought forth a tray containing, among other stones, an opal. As it lay beside the others it appeared dull and altogether of little value.

Then the jeweler took it in his hand and held it for some moments, and again showed it to his customer. Now it shone and flashed with all the hues of the rainbow. It needed the warm touch of a human hand to bring out its color and beauty. There are human lives about us that seem cold and dull and lusterless. Perhaps because they need a helping hand from some of us!

Sentinels of Health

Don't Neglect Them!

Nature designed the kidneys to do a marvelous job. Their task is to keep the flowing blood stream free of an excess of toxic impurities. The act of living—life itself—is constantly producing waste matter the kidneys must remove from the blood if good health is to endure. When the kidneys fail to function as Nature intended, there is retention of waste that may cause body-wide distress. One may suffer nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—feel tired, nervous, all worn out. Frequent, scanty or burning passages are sometimes further evidence of kidney or bladder disturbance. The recognized and proper treatment is a diuretic medicine to help the kidneys get rid of excess poisonous body waste. Use Doan's Pills. They have had more than forty years of public approval. Are endorsed the country over. Insist on Doan's. Sold at all drug stores.

OUTLINES PROCEDURE FOR SENDING ABSENTEE BALLOTS TO MEN IN ARMED FORCES

On August 27, the Governor received a letter from Oscar N. Taylor, Captain, C.E., P. S., Chief, Public Relations Branch of the Office of the Commanding General, written on behalf of the Sixth Service Command, United States Post Office Building, Chicago concerning the procedure to be followed on application for absentee ballots to members of the United States Armed Forces, which stated:

"That no information of value to the enemy might be disclosed in compiling lists of absentee voters in the Army, it is requested that such forms should require only the name rank and approved Army Post Office number if the voter is overseas or approved Army camp or station address if serving within the continental limits of the United States."

"Should the law of your state require that lists of absentee voters be published or posted, the published list should include only the name, and local address of Army personnel, as given for the respective voting district."

Our Statutes provide for posting the address of each absentee voter. The word "address" refers to the local residence and does not conflict with the instructions of Captain Taylor.

ILLINOIS FARMS TO RAISE BIG SCRAP PILE

Before snow flies, Illinois farms must yield a large portion of the 1,790,000 tons of scrap iron and steel set as the state's quota by December 31.

Farms of the state are potential sources of vast supplies of scrap metals, according to Robert Ticken and George Eisenberg, co-chair men of the salvag committee, Illinois Council of Defense.

Salvage from farming areas will be hampered when snow falls and ice freezes metal and old machinery in the fields. Unless the metal reaches the steel mills, blast furnaces will be closed down and the flow of tanks, planes, ships and guns to American soldiers and their Allies on the battlefronts will dwindle.

More than 100 Scrap Harvests and rallies are planned in the state during the next three weeks. Many counties have arranged township rallies, with a farm-to-farm canvass to to garner every bit of metal available.

In most cases prizes of cash or War Bonds are offered, in addition to the regular purchase price paid for junk to those delivering the most scrap metal for war against the Axis.

"Many counties have set a quota of 1,000 pounds of scrap from each of 1000 pounds of scrap from every farm," Chairman Ticken says.

"The Illinois State Council of Defense asks that every bit of metal be started on the road to the battlefronts."

Champaign county set its Junk Harvest Sept. 14 to 18, Kankakee for Sept. 12, Greenville for Sept. 15, and Kewanee for Sept. 26.

reported they are arranging Scrap Harvest days from September include: Arcola, Canton, Centralia, Columbia, Dixon, Enfield, Geneseo, Herrin, Hillsboro, Madison, Maquon, Marshall, Mendon, Morris, Morrison, Palmer, Peru, Princeton, Braidwood, Hoopston, DuQuon, Bellville, Lexington, Sawyerville, Salem, and Freeport.
